

pressdemocrat

Oooh – that smell!

Forget synthetic scents: SF's Agraria lets you go au naturelle with its posh potpourri – perfect for freshening your home or cube this fall.

Though founded in the 70's, the company is a newly hip, having been discovered by Oprah and others, including Lisa Palmer, wife of SoCo's uber-chef Charlie Palmer, who sells Agraria products at Lime Stone, her chic Healdsburg store, right next door to her husband's acclaimed Dry Creek Kitchen.

Instead of chemicals and dyes, Agraria's potpourris are made from pure botanicals. Try the Balsam or Lavendar and Rosemary for a quick fragrance fix.

Or, take a whiff of the sampler set – a favorite for a hostess gift.

Getting Fresh

"Scent your rooms without burning, plugging in, or spraying anything. Just add the reeds to the perfumed oils and inhale."

the O list

"A few things I think are just great." –OPRAH

For a complete archive of Oprah's "O List" picks, go to oprah.com/olist.